

Abstract

A cargo bed extender has two attached members that lay on a cargo area in parallel relation and are aligned from front to back, two movable members that telescope inside the attached members and a cross member at the end of each movable member remote from the attached members. The movable members are held in a selected telescoped position by securing means.